IS YOUR GLASS COMPANY RECESSION-READY?

There is a common fear that small business owners have: the possibility of not being able to pay their bills, and the uncertainty that represents a cash flow crisis. At best, that is what some experts, and many TV pundits, say. Conversely, many experts are looking at the same or similar data and...

STRATEGIES AND NEGOTIATION TIPS FOR EARLY PAYMENT DISCOUNTS

One strategy to receive offers to pay sooner is to offer an early payment discount—usually a 2 percent discount if they pay within 10 days. A previous article in the October 20 issue, "When to Offer Early Payment Discounts," outlined considerations for suppliers. This article presents the...

THE TOP 100 PAYROLL FINANCING SOLUTIONS

Recommended solutions and options to avoid July 16, 2018 by Alanna Carter

The primary responsibility of a business owner or company manager is to make sure that employees are always paid on time. Nothing erodes company morale and employee goodwill more than missing payroll. In my experience financing distressed businesses, few companies ever recover from missing payroll. By the time that reach that point, the situation is already so dire that little can be done. The only effective solution is to prevent it from ever happening. The first step toward this solution is always knowing a company's financial standing. I am always surprised when business owners cannot provide me with accurate financial records. This requirement is common for small business reviews, especially in the construction industry. But without financial reports, how can an owner know where the company stands financially? Cash in the bank is not always a good indicator of how well a company is doing, since it does not give an idea of liabilities or receivables. The best way to get a good financial picture of a business is to update the accounting system regularly and review the following reports:

1. Cash flow statement
2. Accounts receivable aging
3. Accounts payable aging
4. Profit and loss statement
5. Balance sheet.

Once an owner knows where the business stands financially, he or she can better understand where it is headed. An owner should spend time developing a sales forecast, then determine the cost to deliver those sales and evaluate if the company has the resources to do so. This list can be useful. Business often has a cash crunch because they did not have the resources to handle their sales book, but made the sales anyway. It's not unusual for these types of problems to put the business into an uncomfortable situation. Therefore, an owner must plan finances so they can manage the business efficiently and capitalize on opportunities.

The Week in Review

Total construction starts dipped 1.8 percent in September, essentially taking back August's gain. Dodge Data & Analytics economists say the decline is not surprising. glassweek.com covered this week. Like the in person show, the virtual incarnation offers the global glass industry an additional contact platform, an important course to take in the current international circumstances, officials say. Glass Association of Companies and AABA Construction Inc. signed a letter of intent to combine their operations in Phoenix. After the combination, Flynn will have upwards of 5,500 employees, with offices across North America supporting the total building envelope.
